

Massachusetts Hazardous Materials Process Information Training (527 CMR 33.00)

This training is for the purpose of educating and informing local fire departments of the new regulation and its requirements. This training is in addition to what is being offered to the regulated community and is designed for fire service personnel only.

The new regulation contains requirements of both facilities handling hazardous materials and the local head of the fire department. These include:

- Expand required permits to include additional hazardous materials and related material processing (as defined) that may not have been previously subject to a permit or related government oversight.
- The permit will be issued by the local head of the fire department, which will also carry out an enhanced oversight role in implementing the regulatory requirements.
- As a condition to such permitting, the regulation requires disclosure and information regarding the details about the hazardous material process activity-taking place at the facility.
- Once disclosed, certain requirements are established based upon category classification.
- Maintaining the required permit is conditional upon continued compliance with regulatory requirements, which focus on preventive, protective, and safety control measures in conformance with recognized and generally accepted practices.
